

LENT.
The season of Lent is now on. During Lent people who are the leaders of society, and who for 325 days have been attending low-necked balls, stiff-necked receptions, and high-stocking theatres, have been indulging in seven-course dinners with wine to match; who at Long Branch, in short, sweet bathing costumes have flung themselves into the water, and at Saratoga flung water—and some brandy—into themselves; who have flirted and frolicked and danced through the bright days of Summer, masqueraded, feasted and caroused through the short days of Winter, made a jest of life and wasted its precious hours at all seasons, here lay down the burden of their song, put away their musical instruments, look up their ball rooms, ring down the curtains of their theatres, lay aside their purple and fine linen, and for forty long days consent to act like rational beings, attending no balls but codfish balls; attending no plays, save a quiet game of "draw" in darkened parlors; indulging in no flirtations, save a mild one with religion; making no calls, save surreptitious ones on the milliner and dressmaker, on matters purely business. Society sits with closed doors; ashes have taken the place of the brilliant head-dress, and the charms that dazzled and allured covered with sack-cloth—in most instances, sealskin sacque-cloth. It is the Lenten season, when the fast is fasting and some praying—for a rapid passage of the solemn time. This is the city side of Lent. The country is not subject to the rigid discipline of the season. For half a hundred Sundays in the year the hum-drum people attend church, as is becoming to Christians; every day in the year their hospitable doors are open to friend or stranger; every day they work, and eat their labor-sweetened bread and meat—Lent or no Lent. Should they wish to dance, the music made in Lent will not jar upon their ears, and the joyous measure of the dance will not lose its rhythm. They pursue their even, placid course. As there is no dissipation, so there are no headaches; there are no flirtations, so no heartaches; as there is no brandy, so no Seltzer; each day is witness of an honest, well-earned feast, and to the patient worker there comes no fast. Labor is sweetened by repose; eyes are bright with the consciousness of duty done; cheeks rosy with the health vouchsafed from regular lives; there is no mourning save for death; no sorrow save for suffering; no ashes save those that glow upon the family hearth—no broken laws, therefore no broken hearts—no humbug, and in short—as understood in its fashionable sense—no Lent.

The San Francisco Chronicle truly says the gossip about the President's attentions to the wife of an official in Washington is of a cheap kind that seems to interest many people. A Pittsburg paper published a sensational story founded on this gossip, and doubtless the army of female correspondents at the capital, who murder reputations and the language with equal zeal, will not fail to improve the occasion. Any one who knows President Arthur will be loth to put any faith in these stories. He is an accomplished man of the world and has seen too much of society to compromise any lady by his attentions. Whatever his enemies may say of the President's political methods, none of them can find any fault with his personal character or his bearing in a difficult and responsible position.

The Los Angeles papers are jubilant over the crop prospects. The Herald says: "This is going to be the 'daisy' year in Los Angeles, both city and county, and 'don't you forget it.' Such crops as never were gathered there before, such prices as never were realized before, will gladden the heart of the hard-fisted and horny-handed granger."

One year ago Gould had $21,000,000 in Western Union stock. His interest is now $30,000,000. Since Gould went into the company, over two years ago not a share had been transferred from his name; on the contrary, the amount had been steadily increasing.

The Battle Mountain Messenger has been transferred to the Messenger Publishing Company, and will hereafter be edited by E. T. George, formerly of the Lewis Herald. The Journal heartily wishes the new Messenger success.

The chronic scandal mongers of Washington are telling infamous tales about President Arthur. No one believes them, however.

The gross earnings of the Central Pacific in 1882 are now officially given at $25,662,757, against $24,084,101 in 1881.

A DEFENSE OF PROTECTION.
Senator Jones Shows How It Has Benefitted California.

The speech of Senator Jones, of Nevada, delivered on Monday last, was kept back for revision and only appeared in the Congressional Record last Saturday. It is a plea for the protective tariff. Senator Jones, after a long introduction, says: "There can be no doubt that the producers of gold and silver have signally benefited by the system of protection, which has been so long the settled policy of this country. The Comstock lode is famous for its riches in gold and silver, but except in its outcroppings and near the surface it would have been utterly valueless in countries like Mexico or Peru." Comparing San Francisco with the Atlantic coast cities in respect to the elements of the cost of fabricating any given piece of iron machinery, Jones says that there can be no doubt that it can be produced more cheaply in the latter, where raw material, labor and interest upon capital are all lower, and where the current rate of profit expected upon business enterprises is also lower. Nevertheless the people of the Western slope find it to be to their interest to go to San Francisco for engines, hoisting apparatus, crushing and pulverizing machinery and various other appliances needed in the business of mining. This can only be explained by supposing, what is an actual fact, that they can find in San Francisco what is most serviceable for use and best adapted to their wants.

The reason is that the proprietors of the foundries and machine shops in San Francisco, and the workmen employed in them, are in constant personal intercourse with the mining classes and learn in that way what works best in practice; at what point special difficulties are encountered; what are the best means of overcoming them, and if these San Francisco establishments did not exist, with their auxiliary establishments in nearly every town on the Pacific coast, the miners, who are bound to deal for their mining appliances at arm's-length with Eastern mechanics, from whom they are separated by nearly a month's time in transportation of freight, could never have approximated the mining results which they have actually; and this illustrates in what way and to what extent all such industries of the country as require or are facilitated by mechanical appliances would have been kept back. If we had consented to a policy under which all our tools and machinery would have been imported from Europe we should have had no workmen on the spot by whom machinery could be repaired, and as all machinery is subject to breakage, users would suffer constant losses from the long suspension of their operations. Furthermore, the country would have lost the benefit of all improvement in mine machinery and of all adaptations to them to our special wants, which have been made by our artisans. The rapid building up of a great manufacturing industry in that district illustrates the wisdom, not of a tariff for revenue, but a high protective tariff. The machine shops of San Francisco and the Pacific coast would never have been started but for the great cost and delays of freight from the East before the completion of the Pacific Railroad, which in fact operated as a tariff much higher than has ever protected the machine shops of the Atlantic coast. On the question of foreign immigration he said we are not insensible to the fact that there are differences between different classes of European extraction in respect both to their living at home and to their degree.

Our National Park.
[Frank Leslie's.]

Of the fifty million inhabitants of the United States how small a number are more than dimly conscious that the nation has reserved for their use and behoof in the Far West a pleasure-ground of such vast extent and marvelous natural attractions that it is destined to be one of the greatest wonders of the world! "The Yellowstone National Park," in the northwest corner of Wyoming Territory, was "reserved" by Congress in 1872. It covers an area larger by two hundred square miles than both Rhode Island and Delaware, being sixty-five miles in length by fifty-five in breadth; and a bill is now before the Senate which proposes to increase it by more than three thousand square miles. It is accessible at present only by the roughest and rudest means, but the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad—an event expected to occur within the present year—will bring it within the easy reach of all who may be attracted by its wonders. This grand park, at the lowest point, is three hundred feet higher than Mount Washington. The soil, at this elevation, is unfit for cultivation, while its volcanic nature makes it worthless for mining purposes. One of its attractions is the Yellowstone Lake, the fourth in size of the fresh-water lakes of the United States, resting in placid beauty on the top of the main range of the Rocky Mountains, 7,788 feet above the level of the sea. It covers three hundred square miles, has a coast line of nearly two hundred miles, and in many places has a depth of three hundred feet. Its clear blue waters abound with trout, and every variety of wild fowl hover over it. On its banks are dense forests of pine, spruce and fir, furnishing covers for all sorts of wild game—elk, antelope, deer, bears and mountain sheep. This lake is the source of the Yellowstone River, which flows through the most wonderful gorges and canyons, and over precipices from one hundred and forty to four hundred feet in height. It is probably the grandest trout stream in the world, while the scenery inclosing it is marked by every variety of natural beauty and grandeur. The volcanic forces at work beneath the soil in some portions of the park produce the mightiest geysers in the world, and the great pools of boiling sulphur-water whose borders display an indescribable wealth of coloring.

We have not space for further description of the objects of natural interest which excite the wonder of the tourist in almost every part of this grand national reservation. Unfortunately they also excite the cupidity of frontier adventurers and unscrupulous capitalists, who hold that Uncle Sam's geese were made to be plucked by the first comer. There is danger that the park will become a prey to speculators, who will set up their toll-gates on every spot commanding a view of its most attractive scenery. They are sniffling around it on every side and forming schemes for their aggrandizement, regardless of the rights of the public. The agreement of the Interior Department to give a certain association of capitalists a lease of more than four thousand acres for ten years, with certain exclusive rights as to the erection of hotels running stages, etc., is regarded by many with aversion; and Senator Vest, of Missouri, has introduced a bill to guard against abuses that might grow out of this and similar schemes. General Sheridan, in his annual report, calls attention to the subject, and asks for authority to protect the game of the park from destruction by hunters. It is to be hoped that Congress, in this matter, will legislate in the interest, not of unscrupulous speculators, but of the whole people of the United States, and with a view to preserve the park from spoliation.

"Made New Again."

Mrs. Wm. D. Ryckman, St. Catharines, Ont., says: "R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. I was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk across the floor without fainting, could keep nothing in the shape of food on my stomach. An Abandoned Babe.

A woman who registered as "Mrs. Hicks, Eureka," left a boy babe three months old at the Depot Hotel night before last, and has not been heard from since. She left a note stating that the babe was fatherless, and liable to be motherless soon. With this was $2 50 in money. As soon as the facts became known there was somewhat of a picnic around the hotel, but the little one was taken care of, and Gen. Davis raised $33 for its immediate wants. Three or four different persons have signified their willingness to adopt the little waif.

An Outrage.

The JOURNAL understands that Dr. Clark, of Stockton, still retains insane patients committed from Nevada, and that at the time the transfer was made to the State he only turned over the indigent patients, retaining all of the paying patients, among whom are Mrs. Peleg Brown, of this county, and a Mrs. Battles, of Storey. The Commissioners should take immediate steps to see that these patients are delivered to Nevada. How they overlooked it in the first place is difficult for the JOURNAL to understand.

SILVER COINAGE.

A Newspaper Sounding an Alarm—Recommendations that Business be Conducted on a Gold Basis.

The New York Evening Post sounds another alarm concerning the prospects of silver coinage. "At the rate now going on it will have reached $120,000,000 by the close of the year. No probability exists of Congress reaching a vote on any pending bill or resolution on the subject. Among all the clouds hanging over national prosperity, nothing is so alarming to our business men as the anomalous silver coinage question. It is of more immediate importance than the tariff question, yet it has not received one hour's discussion in either branch of Congress during the present season. Every day's delay brings us nearer the possible catastrophe of a change of monetary standards or a conflict of standards or some other tripping stone which will probably suffice, when it is reached, to plunge all business into confusion and the industrial classes into dire distress. As every note of warning is drowned at Washington by the din and clangor of iron and steel, we suggest to the commercial classes everywhere that they put their business so far as possible on a gold basis by stamping, printing or writing the word "gold" on every piece of paper they receive or execute. The banks of New York and Boston have done this already by resolution, and the banks elsewhere, national and saving, will do so in due time. Nearly all the corporations and large lenders exercise this prudence, which cannot be too highly commended and imitated."

Railway Building in 1893.

The impression is very general that railway building in 1893 is to be reduced to a minimum, and that miles of new road to be constructed in this year will bear no comparison with the large mileage of 1892. Why this opinion finds so general acceptance can be accounted for only by the repeated representations that capital willing to enter upon these enterprises is well nigh exhausted, and that the field for new roads that will pay for construction is now well supplied with facilities for transportation. The Railway Age has been at some pains to obtain information of the number of railway companies organized in the past year and the extent of new road projected. From information obtained there seems to be no decline in new projects compared with the past two years, or the hopefulness of railway constructors for obtaining the means for carrying on work. In Illinois, according to the Age, there were incorporated in the past year fifty new companies, which propose to build no less than 3,800 miles more road in that State, and from what has so far been learned, this is only representative of what is going forward in other States and Territories. In reviewing the subject, our contemporary concludes that: "Those who have been predicting that railway building will be comparatively at a standstill during the coming year, and that consequently manufactures of material, supplies and equipment will have little to do, will soon find themselves greatly mistaken, as did the same gloomy prophets at the beginning of 1892. Already, although the greater portion of the country is locked in the embrace of a winter of unusual severity, the notes of preparation for a great campaign of railway construction are heard on every hand, while tens of thousands of men are making the frosty air ring with the sound of the pick and shovel and the blast of exploding powder as they push forward works already nearing completion."

Illustrative of the necessity of additional railroads, the Age presents a table of the square miles of territory and population per mile of road in the several accepted divisions of the country. In the six New England States there are 10.1 square miles of territory and 654 inhabitants to each mile of railroad; in five Middle States, 6.4 square miles and 676 inhabitants; in five middle Western States, 7.9 square miles and 503 inhabitants; in ten Southern States east of the Mississippi River, 25.1 square miles and 684 inhabitants; in five Colorado belt States and Territories, 92.6 square miles and 87 inhabitants; and in the six Pacific belt States and Territories, 101.3 square miles and 203 inhabitants. Our contemporary concludes:

If Illinois, with not much less than 9,000 miles in operation, having one mile of railway to every six square miles of area, can project three or four thousand miles more in a single year, what are the possibilities in the great new Western States and Territories, where the ratio of area to railway mileage is ten, twenty, thirty, forty times greater, and even more?—[N. Y. Daily Indicator.]

President Houston, of the Pacific Mail, confirms the statement regarding the probable increase of the service to four ships per month, agents having been dispatched to the Mexican, Columbian and South American ports to ascertain if the prospects of traffic justify the increase, and their report is awaited by Houston and Gould, to whom the question has been referred by the other directors.
